Subject Example Co — cutting fryer-oil cost with ProWave™

Hi Anna,

I'm Jesse from Dr. Fry. We make ProWave™ — a molecular device that extends commercial frying-oil life, so kitchens buy far less oil and dump far less waste.

In field testing with convenience-store chains in Japan we've measured meaningful oil-cost reductions per site. I'd love to show you the numbers for an operation like Example Co.

Worth a short look? Here's the field study: <https://drfry.nl/case-study/seven-eleven>

Hi Anna,

Following up with the concrete data — here's the FamilyMart demo & testing summary: <https://drfry.nl/familymart-demo-and-testing.pdf>

Short version: same oil, running clean for materially longer, with lower disposal volume. Happy to walk you through what it'd look like for Example Co.

Hi Anna,

I put together a quick way to estimate the savings for your volume — takes about a minute: <https://drfry.nl/roi-calculator>

If the payback looks right, the next step is a no-cost trial unit in one kitchen so you can verify it yourself.

Hi Anna,

I don't want to crowd your inbox — this is my last note for now. If reducing fryer-oil spend is worth a 15-minute call this quarter, just reply and I'll set it up. Otherwise I'll leave you to it.

Either way, thanks for reading.

Subject Example Co — proving your cold chain held, per shipment

Hi Anna,

I'm with FahCel. We turn every temperature-logger reading into a tamper-evident record the moment it's ingested — so you can prove your cold chain held from the dock to the shelf, not reconstruct it after a dispute.

For an operation like Example Co, that means a retail audit or a lost-cold claim is settled with a verifiable chain, not a spreadsheet nobody trusts.

Worth a short look? Here's the live tracking demo: <https://fahcel.eu/demo>

Hi Anna,

Following up with a concrete example — here's the Nordkjøl case study:

Short version: frozen-seafood exports, a retail audit, and every pallet's cold chain verifiable on demand — no more he-said-she-said with the carrier. Happy to walk through what it'd look like for Example Co.

Subject What a single lost-cold dispute costs Example Co

Hi Anna,

Most operators we talk to have eaten at least one rejected shipment they couldn't contest. Here's a sample of the inspection-ready record FahCel produces — the kind that ends the argument: <https://fahcel.eu/sample-inspection-report.pdf>

If it looks useful, the next step is a short walkthrough on one of your real routes so you can see a chain get verified yourself.

Subject Your Cold-Chain Excursion Playbook is inside

Hi Anna,

Thanks for grabbing the Cold-Chain Excursion Playbook — here it is if you'd like it again: <https://fahcel.eu/playbook>

It's a 9-minute read. If you only take one thing from it, make it the first move: freeze the record the instant the alarm fires, before you touch the pallet. Almost every avoidable write-off traces back to the silent hours after a breach, not the breach itself.

I'll follow up in a few days with the move most teams skip. Reply anytime if a question comes up.

Subject The move most cold-chain teams skip

Hi Anna,

Quick follow-up on the playbook. The move teams skip isn't a fancy one — it's pulling the FULL temperature history, not just the peak, before making a call.

Duration and cumulative exposure decide product stability far more than a single spike. A 20-minute logging gap during a breach is worst-case until proven otherwise. Decide on the record, on the shift — a documented same-day disposition beats a perfect analysis that lands three days late.

Page 3 of the guide has the pre-departure checklist that prevents most of these in the first place: <https://fahcel.eu/playbook>

Subject Want the six moves to run themselves, Anna?

Hi Anna,

Last note on the playbook. Everything in it is the manual version — FahCel runs the same six moves automatically: a sealed, tamper-evident temperature record from load to handoff, so the disposition and the evidence that backs it are always in one place.

If you'd like to see it on one of Example Co's real lanes, it's a 20-minute walkthrough with your own shipment data: <https://fahcel.eu/demo>

Either way, hope the guide was useful.

Subject The least risky way to test UGC for Example Co

Hi Anna,

If you're weighing whether creator content is worth it, here's the simplest test we know:

One video. €79, fully edited, matched to your brand within 24 hours. Full usage rights, forever. If it doesn't earn its keep, you have 180 days to ask for a refund.

Most brands start with one video and scale to six a month once the numbers show up in their ad account.
